

Connie Fort Mayo

Connie Mayo has served as one of the two commissioners for District 3 since 2013. This includes the city of Pleasant View and the adjoining area.

Retired now, she spent the bulk of her career with the Cheatham County School System. There she first taught elementary grades in several elementary schools and later served directly under six directors of schools in several capacities where she worked with principals and teachers to educate Cheatham County children.

After her 36 years stint in Cheatham County, she accepted the position of Elementary Director for the state of Tennessee where she worked with school systems statewide to assist with the implementation of new programs and improve those already instituted. She also had the responsibility of approving home school applications, and non-public (private) schools.

Upon retirement, in 2010, she continued in education by teaching classes at several local universities including Lipscomb, Western Kentucky, Austin Peay, and Argosy. Completely retired now, she volunteers at the Nashville Airport assisting travelers and Salud (the cooking school at Whole Foods).

Nearly a lifelong resident of Cheatham County, she lived in Knox County for one year, and McNairy County for two years, always returning home to the Brewers Chapel Community. Ms. Mayo believes in government transparency, well-planned growth, and safe communities.
